

TRIALS LISTED HERE INCLUDE M'CURDY CASE

W. A. Geiselman,
Clerk, Gives List
For April Term Of Quarter Sessions.

BRUCE FUNT TO BE GIVEN TRIAL

The trial list for the April term of quarter sessions' court, which begins here Monday, April 28, was announced today by W. A. Geiselman, clerk of the courts. Twenty-eight new actions are listed for trial.

Among the cases listed for trial is the manslaughter action against Glenn McCurdy, of Dillsburg, R. D., arrested recently in connection with the death of Geraldine Esther King, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice King, near York Springs, who was killed by an automobile, driven by McCurdy, at a public sale March 23, 1929.

McCurdy Case
A coroner's jury returned an open verdict against McCurdy some time after the accident, and the case was believed closed, until last month, when the victim's father swore out a warrant for the Dillsburg youth's arrest.

Another case expected to be tried is that in which Bruce Funt, near York Springs, is charged with tampering with and obstructing justice. Funt was acquitted on a charge of operating a car while under the influence of liquor at the January term of court, but was re-arrested at the direction of Judge Donald P. McPherson when a commonwealth witness testified that, as a member of the November grand jury, Funt approached him and asked him to use his influence in having an indictment on the drunken driving charge dismissed.

Other Actions
Other actions listed for the coming term include John Brown, Charles Brown, Roy Laughman and Percy Laughman, charged with larceny; Clayton Myers, desertion and non-support; Max Laison, operating a motor vehicle without a license; Charles Kauffman, Paul Naugle and Edward Kauffman, malicious mischief to timber; Henry J. Grange, exceeding the speed limit; John DePaul, larceny; Ralph Shultz, operating a car while under the influence of liquor.

AUTO DEATHS HIGH IN 1929

One Killed Every 17 Minutes
During Past Year, Local Club President Says.

There was an average of one person killed in an automobile accident every 17 minutes during 1929, according to Elton Boyer, president of the Gettysburg Motor club, which is affiliated with the American Automobile association.

Mr. Boyer bases his statement on a report received from the A. A. A. safety department showing that a total of 31,500 people were killed in automobile accidents last year.

The A. A. A. club executive pointed out that this represents an increase of around 12 per cent over 1928, when approximately 28,000 fatalities were attributed to motor vehicle accidents.

"This increase," he continued, "is especially significant when it is considered that motor vehicle registrations increased only eight per cent in the same period. This means that the gain in fatalities was four per cent greater than the increase in registrations."

Names Causes
Mr. Boyer said that as the population increased only about one per cent during the year, the gain in accidents can hardly be attributed to this cause.

"There were approximately 107 deaths to every 100,000 registered in 1929," he concluded. "This represents an upward trend since 1927. There were 157.4 deaths per 100,000 cars registered in 1918 and there was a decrease of a rate of 95.5 in 1926. In that year, the thermometer of motor vehicle fatalities started upward and 1929 established a new record."

"In other words, deaths from motor vehicles have increased threefold in a ten-year period. Only 15 per cent of accidental deaths were caused by motor vehicles in 1919, while last year they accounted for approximately 32 per cent."

Essay on Landmarks Wins D. A. R. Prize Offered Here

Miss Alma Sheely, New Oxford, with her essay entitled "Historic Landmarks in Adams County," was named the winner of the D. A. R. essay contest conducted in the Gettysburg high school each year. The prize was $10. The winning essay follows:

"Pennsylvania was originally owned by one of the most honest, upright, unselfish, and Christian men who endeavored to develop America—William Penn. He established the colony now Pennsylvania to make a home for the persecuted Quakers of England. Penn himself was a very devout Quaker."

"The English government owed Mr. Penn, Sr., a sum of money which at the time of his death was still unpaid. The son, William, proposed that he be given a tract of land in the New World in payment of this debt. The government agreed and thus William Penn realized his greatest dream—that of setting up a home in America where his fellow-believers could worship as they pleased."

JURY GIVES VERDICT IN CRASH DEATH

No Attempt To Fix
Blame In Accident
Near Fairfield
Sunday.

GEORGE EPLEY FATALLY INJURED

Ivan Riggeal, Cashtown, entered $1,000 bail, Friday afternoon, after his arrest on a capias in a civil action for damages brought by Ray H. Epley, Mt. Pleasant township, near Two Taverns, as a result of an automobile accident on the Orrtanna-Fairfield road, last Sunday, in which Epley's son, George R. Epley, was fatally injured.

The capias was served on Riggeal after the coroner's inquest, by Deputy Sheriff Louis Wagaman. H. E. Riddlemoser, McKnightstown, furnished bail for Riggeal.

Plaintiff's Statement
In the plaintiff's preliminary statement, filed in the office of S. L. Allison, prothonotary, Epley sets forth that besides the fatal injury of his son, George, his wife and two other children, suffered injuries. He also set forth that his automobile was almost completely demolished in the crash. He estimates his damages at $2,500.

A factual verdict was returned by a coroner's jury in the death of George R. Epley, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray H. Epley, near Two Taverns, after hearing testimony at the scene of last Sunday evening's accident on the Orrtanna-Fairfield road, Friday afternoon.

By the verdict, Ivan Riggeal, Cashtown, driver of a car which sideswiped Epley's machine, causing it to leave the road and upset, was not exonerated nor was he held culpable. District Attorney John P. Butt informed the jurors that a civil action for damages was pending against Riggeal.

Six witnesses were heard by the coroner's jury. They were Epley, driver of the car and father of the victim; Preston Rudisill, Gettysburg, an occupant of the machine; Mr. and Mrs. John Rebert, who reside near Orrtanna; R. Mervin Singley, who lives near the scene of the accident, and Patrolman L. V. Bomgardner, who investigated the crash.

Coroner In Charge
The inquest was held by Dr. E. A. Miller, Adams county coroner, with District Attorney Butt questioning the witness. Epley was represented at the hearing by Attorney W. Clarence Sheely. Riggeal had no counsel.

Epley, driver of the car in which eight persons were riding, said he did not hear a horn sounded before Riggeal's machine pulled up beside his touring car and started to pass, but two other witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Rebert, who were on another road, several hundred feet away, said they heard Riggeal sound a warning before he passed Epley's car.

Fix Crash Spot
Both Epley and Rudisill fixed the point where Riggeal's machine passed them near a stone culvert, but Rebert said the cars passed some distance before they reached the culvert. Rebert quoted Epley as having said after the accident, that he pulled his car off the road.

Rebert said he saw Epley's machine travel along the road for some distance after Riggeal's car passed it before the Two Taverns man's machine left the highway and upset.

Epley Testifies
Epley testified that his car left the road after it was sideswiped at the culvert, and Singley said that after the accident he noticed a short tire skid mark on the road at the culvert. The mark, he said, seemed to have been made by a tire which had been pushed to the side.

Singley and Patrolman Bomgardner also testified to fresh scratches on the fender and rear bumper of Riggeal's car after the accident, and a rim from Epley's car was introduced in evidence. The rim bore fresh scratches.

The Epley boy, who was hurt internally, died at the Warner hospital, Monday evening. The other seven persons in Epley's machine were injured. Riggeal was alone in his car.

On the coroner's jury were Samuel E. Young, Maurice Whorley, Milton Benner, L. U. Collins, C. R. Wolff and H. M. Oyler.

BISHOP'S SON
HELD IN DEATH

Kept Father Poor While He Tried To Write Stories; Killed Aged Man.

New York, April 19 (AP).—James Matthew Maxon, Jr., 21, an Episcopal bishop's son who aspired to be a writer of detective stories, found himself in a predicament Friday, quite as ominous as any he had ever devised for characters in his fiction plots.

White and shaky, as alcohol gradually cleared from his brain, young Maxon, son of Bishop Coadjutor James Matthew Maxon, of Tennessee, sat in an uptown police station, accused by fellow boarders of having killed while in a drunken frenzy in the night a shabby old man whom he had never seen before.

Youth Ran Amok
The boy ran amok, they said, in the cheap brownstone lodging house on West End avenue, where he had lived only a few days, chased the landlady and the other lodgers all over the place and finally beat the life out of David Paynter, 73, who despite the frailty of his years had the courage to stand up against him.

One of the roomers, who said he had fled in terror from the young man, told police that through a window he saw Maxon knock the old man down and then bring a chair crashing over his head. With the wreckage of the chair lying about him, Paynter was dead when police arrived.

Find Father's Letter
While waiting for him to sober up, police went to Maxon's room. There they said they found a four-page letter dated April 12 from his father, evidently inspired by the boy's telegraphed request for $15.

More Complications;
Davis And Pinchot
Linked Together

Philadelphia, April 19 (AP).—The Pennsylvania primary campaign has reached a highly complicated stage with new mixed conditions cropping up nearly every day by action of various political and industrial groups linking together candidates for United States senator and governor who supposedly are on opposite tickets.

Another example of this is the coupling of former Governor Gifford Pinchot, so called independent candidate for the governorship, with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, candidate for the senatorial nomination on the ticket backed by the Philadelphia organization which includes Francis Shunk Brown for governor.

Helps Woman With Wash While He Gets Census Data

Minneapolis, April 19 (AP).—For an hour Maurice Rosenzweig, census enumerator, wrestled furniture, helped with the family wash and did other housework because a housewife was "too busy" to stop and answer questions.

Then both took time out and Rosenzweig got his information. He will get 16 cents from the government for the hour's work. Rosenzweig says he has taken care of at least ten babies and has even run errands to get his census reports.

Man Arrested In Baker Murder Case Tells Officers He Was With Wife.

Washington, April 19 (AP).—Another lull came today in efforts to determine who killed Mary Baker, young Navy department employee, as Virginia authorities questioned Gullian Gallagher, held in Richmond, and checked the story told by Marvin Sisson, taken into custody at his home in Warsaw, Va., yesterday.

Letters found in Miss Baker's room and stories told by the girl's roommates established that she was on friendly terms with both men and that she was a member of an overnight party in Baltimore recently in which the pair and another girl participated.

Sisson and Gallagher, both traveling salesmen, maintained that they can account for their movements on the night that Miss Baker was killed and her body put into a culvert near Arlington national cemetery.

Officials said after questioning Sisson that he seemed to have a perfect alibi. Sisson's story was that he was with his wife and family on the night that Miss Baker was slain.

Washington, April 19 (AP).—Marvin Sisson, a traveling salesman, was arrested at Warsaw, Virginia, late Friday by Washington and Arlington county officers, on a warrant charging him with the murder of Miss Mary Baker, whose body was found near Arlington cemetery last Saturday.

The officers started immediately for Arlington county, whether any charges were placed against Sisson was not known.

A great crowd gathered Friday night around the Arlington county courthouse, while reports were current at Arlington and in Washington that Sisson might be taken to Richmond or elsewhere to avoid the crowd and to hasten the questioning.

Killed Friend To Get $200,000 Fund, Confession States

St. Louis, April 19 (AP).—The St. Louis Post Dispatch says today in a dispatch from Bentonville, Arkansas, that Dr. A. J. Bass, Missouri dentist, has confessed that he shot and killed William R. Pearman, his friend, on March 28, in a plot to collect $200,000 insurance he held on Pearman's life, under the name of William Foltz.

The newspaper says that in the confession Dr. Bass admitted he killed Pearman on a road while driving to Columbia, their home, from Kansas City.

The confession says Dr. Bass hauled Pearman's body to his farm, kept it there overnight and the next day drove with it to Joplin, Mo., more than 250 miles away. Bass is quoted as saying that his accomplice then took the body to Arkansas where they dumped it out.

Assure Ministers Of Pension Support

Philadelphia, April 19 (AP).—Announcement was made today that Presbyterian ministers throughout the United States are assured of definite pension support under an overtime which has just been adopted by a majority of the 293 Presbyteries.

This overtime requires that every church on calling a minister to its pastorate will contribute to the board of pensions each year a sum equal to seven and one-half per cent of his salary in addition to paying the minister his full salary thereby guaranteeing his participation in the pension system.

Find Bank Open; Big Sum Unguarded

New York, April 19 (AP).—A crowd of boys in West Twenty-third street were playing hide and seek last night when Harry Restel, 12, found what he thought was an ideal place to hide.

Harry tried the doors of the Interstate Trust company and found them open. He groped his way into the darkened interior and found an inner set of doors open also. Later he told the gang about it.

The boys found a policeman who returned to the bank with them. The policeman found the doors of a vault opened. In the vault was silver valued at $7,000. No watchman was on duty.

SPEND MILLION ON ADVERTISING

Gettysburg Times Selected As One Of Best Mediums For Fridgidaire Schedule.

The largest newspaper advertising campaign in the history of Fridgidaire Corporation, electric refrigerator subsidiary of General Motors, is being launched this month, following a first quarter of unusual activity. E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, made known from the home office in Dayton, Ohio, today.

One million dollars will be spent for advertising this spring in approximately 2,500 newspapers in the United States, of which The Gettysburg Times is one, to tell the story of this electric refrigerator, Mr. Biechler said.

"The million dollar newspaper campaign, which will be the backbone of our spring activity, expresses our faith in newspaper advertising, a faith predicted upon the experiences gained from many years of advertising," said Mr. Biechler.

"Newspapers," he continues, "played a prominent part in recent introduction of the hydrator, a moist air compartment which enables the housewife to perfectly preserve vegetables and revive those that have wilted. The hydrator, a part of all household models, is being acclaimed today, three months after its introduction, in homes in all parts of the country, and numerous letters of commendation have been received by the corporation."

The parachute was discovered Sunday evening by Delvin Cline, and on Monday Benjamin Moats and Guernsey Stull climbed the tree and got the parachute.

The parachute had a burned-on flare attached to it, such as is used by airmen to find their bearings in murky weather. The parachute itself was much larger than the ordinary flare parachute.

When the officers arrived they found that the white silk fabric had been cut into pieces and was being used by residents for souvenir handkerchiefs.

JACQUELINE ON HER OWN

by RICHARD STARR

SYNOPSIS: An exciting nocturnal adventure takes Jacqueline's thoughts from Teddy and other things. In a vain effort to win Jacqueline for the fortune he mistakenly believes she has inherited, Arthur Carew stalls his car in the country and forcibly makes love to her. Jacqueline tricks him and escapes. Lost in the fog she sees a motor accident and rescues an old gentleman from beneath his automobile. She goes for aid and when the old man is made comfortable in the country doctor's home, catches the mail train back to London after promising to see the grateful old gentleman again.

Chapter 29

BILLS AND CHECKS

By this time, Jacqueline was very far from being a rich woman. She had arrived at the stage when she was afraid to look at her bank book knowing that the end of her solvency was getting shockingly near.

The name on the card the nice old gentleman had given her was Paul Dexter, with an address in the city. Four days later hewn she thought he would be fully recovered from his injuries she rang up Mr. Dexter.

"Is that Mr. Dexter?" asked Jacqueline.

"Dexter speaking," was the sharp rejoinder. "Who is it?"

"How are you this morning?" asked Jacqueline nicely.

"I'm all right, thanks. Who's speaking?"

"I'm afraid you won't know my name," replied Jacqueline, "as you have never heard it. But I am the girl you met the other night out in the country."

"Eh—what's that?" came the sharp voice from the other end of the wire. "Say that again."

"The girl you met the other night in the country when you had your motor accident."

"I don't know what you are talking about. I did not meet a girl in the country the other night, because I have not been out of London for at least a month. I have never had a motor accident in my life. You've got the wrong number."

Jacqueline began to feel slightly annoyed. After all he had asked her to call.

"If your name is Paul Dexter you are the man I want," she said, patiently. "You gave me your card four nights ago when your car was smashed up, and you asked me to ring you up to see how you were getting on."

"Look here," Mr. Dexter broke in brusquely, "you may think this is funny, but I don't. You are wasting my time, and I am busy. Please get off the line."

Jacqueline was about to give Mr. Dexter a piece of her mind when she heard a clank.

"Well, of all the base ingratitude," she said, as she left the instrument. "He looked such a nice old gentleman, too."

She dismissed Mr. Dexter from her mind as an ungrateful and deceitful old man.

So she turned once again to the business of seeing a gay time. It was becoming more than ever a business now. She tried to interest herself in theaters and dances, and had a perfectly miserable time for nearly a week.

During that time she saw no more of Mr. Carew or of Mrs. Porter Mason or of Teddy Montrose.

The more she tried to put Teddy out of her mind, the more she found herself thinking and dreaming of him, and picturing all the wonderful things that might have been if only she had been really rich.

She dreamed, too, and the dreams were the most wonderful of all. She was always rich in the dreams, and she always made the same little speech.

"What does it matter if you are poor, Teddy?" she would say. "Never mind about your silly old father. What does money matter? And, anyway, I have enough for two. If you don't feel that you can share my money, the same as I would share yours if you had heaps, I'll give it away. I've been poor before."

And Teddy would smile at her in her dreams. Nowhere in the world was there another smile like Teddy's.

And he also always made the same little speech. "The world is full of a number of things."

After that he would take her in his arms and hold her very tight. And that was perhaps the best part of the dream.

But stern reality was a different matter. Exactly how stern it was she realized when she received a telephone call in her sitting-room at the Majestic, and found herself speaking with the manager of the bank.

"Sorry to worry you, Miss Grey," the manager said urbanely. "But your account is overdrawn."

"Oh—I'm so awfully sorry," replied Jacqueline, in her new manner, which she managed very well.

"Oh—that's quite all right, Miss Grey. Just thought I would draw your attention to it in case you had overlooked it. I always make a point in these cases of ringing up for instructions."

He paused expectantly. "You see, Miss Grey," he went on, "we have just received your check made out to the management of the Majestic hotel for 60 pounds."

"B—but I thought that was paid."

from him, because there was such a light of joy and triumph in his eyes.

What had happened? Why had he come back? She was thinking of the packed suitcase in the other room, and the hat and coat which lay ready on the bed. Her little holiday had come to an end. Tonight the Jacqueline whom Teddy had known would vanish like Cinderella at the stroke of midnight. What was it that Teddy had come to say?

"Princess," he said, "I want you to love me."

Teddy calmly dropped his hat and coat on the floor and held his arms out. It was just a step, and Jacqueline did not quite know what she was doing until she found that she had crept between those sheltering arms against his broad chest.

"Oh, Teddy," she whispered with a catch in her voice, "I ought not to do this."

"It's the best thing you have ever done, Jacqueline, my little sweetheart. Look at me, darling!"

But Jacqueline could not look at him. She kept her head down wondering whether the rhythmic thudding in her ears was the sound of her own heart or Teddy's.

"Listen, then," said Teddy. "Do you love me, Jacqueline?"

"I—I don't know."

"But you must know, Jacqueline. Is there anybody else?"

"Oh, no, no, Teddy. There isn't anybody else. There never has been anybody else. Please believe me."

"Of course I believe you. Then you love me, Jacqueline."

"I—I suppose I do, Teddy."

"That won't do at all—"

"Yes, I do love you, Teddy. Oh, I love you, dear, with every little bit of myself, and if I have to leave you—I—I think I shall die."

Whereupon the masterful Teddy, it appeared, was satisfied. He folded her against the white expanse of his polished shirt-front and held her very tightly.

And Jacqueline forgot the packed suitcase in the bedroom, and for a little while was happier than she had ever been in her life before.

And so was Teddy.

"All this," Jacqueline told herself, "is very wrong and silly, and I have no business to do such a thing. I am only a wretched little imposter, and—and he loves me because he doesn't know what I am."

She had not meant this to happen. This, indeed, was the very thing which she had intended should never happen. She had never believed, until this moment that he did love her.

But she was glad he did.

For quite a considerable time after she had come to her senses and realized quite plainly what she was doing, she remained in Teddy's arms. It seemed the safest place she had been in for years.

Hearing him murmur something, she looked up into his face. There was just a sufficient suggestion of moisture in her brown eyes to make Teddy's brain swim more than it was swimming already.

"What are you saying, Teddy?" she asked.

"I was saying," Teddy replied solemnly, "that the world is full of a number of things."

"Gracious, goodness, boy, can't you think of something more original than that for once?"

"That is original," replied Teddy with satisfaction. "Nobody says it but I; and the world is more full of things to-day than it has ever been."

"Don't you think you had better let me go?" suggested Jacqueline.

"No," replied Teddy, with conviction.

"But you can't hold me like this forever."

"I think I could," said Teddy.

Nevertheless, he released her. He felt that if he held her much longer he would kiss her, and until he had said what he had come to say, he did not consider he had a right to kiss her.

There was a distinction between holding her tight and kissing her which perhaps only Teddy could understand, although even he could not have explained it.

Released from his hold, the full meaning of her unhappy position came flooding back to Jacqueline. She realized now that she loved Teddy so much that he meant the whole world to her. And she had to go away from him.

There was just one faint hope—and she had to turn her face away from him, because there was such a light of joy and triumph in his eyes.

ough. The town was laid out in 1780 and was called "Gettys" or "Gettes."

"The first real residence in 'Gettys' was a spacious, two-story log house erected by Mr. Gettys. It was in the rear of the old Hoffman hotel on York street and was opened as an inn. The old building stood until 1800 when it was accidentally destroyed by fire."

"Hunterstown seemed the most formidable as it was the center of population. However, the committee appointed decided in favor of 'Gettystown,' as it had come to be called. Probably they foresaw the time when Adams county would be the thriving place it is now and realized that a centrally located county seat would be better in the end than one that would be so for the time being only."

Courthouse Built.

"A courthouse, built according to the style of the time, was erected in the center of the public square."

"A great need for a post office arose as there was none nearer than York. The government established one in 1798 and James Scott became the first postmaster, appointed July 1 of the same year."

"Adams county has a great distinction in being the place where the first hardy pioneer to settle west of the Susquehanna river made his home. He was John Hanson Steelman, a sturdy Swede born at what is now Gray's Ferry Bridge, Philadelphia, in the year 1655. His parents were Swedish immigrants. Mr. Steelman was a very good friend of William Penn and in 1700 and 1701 was his correspondent in Philadelphia. He settled in what is now Liberty township and became an Indian trader and interpreter, having many friends among the Red Men."

Erect Monument.

"On November 29, 1924, the Pennsylvania Historical commission, the Swedish Colonial society and citizens of Adams county erected a monument in Mr. Steelman's honor on the land once owned by him near Zora, Liberty township. The marker is fixed to a large, native boulder which is picturesquely located on a slight elevation in primitive woodland. We cannot claim this great landmark as all our own. It belongs to the state as well for it marked the beginning of the great westward movement that followed the purchasing of the western section of the state from the Indians."

"Border troubles between Penn and Lord Baltimore were the real cause of the first pioneers coming into what turned out to be Adams county. Andrew Schriber (Shriver) was the first one to enter, coming in 1734. He located near the place now called Conewago in Conewago township. The land claimed by Mr. Shriver later became the homestead of George Basehoar. It lies about three miles east of Littlestown and five miles northeast of Hanover near Christ Reformed church. Mr. Shriver's land was on 'Digges' Choice,' which was a grant of land from Lord Baltimore to John Digges, an Englishman, and comprising the present limits of Germany and Conewago townships."

'Manor of Maske'

"The story relating to the 'Manor of Maske' is very interesting and also important for it goes to show that Adams county is a beautiful and fertile place."

"In the year 1736 Penn purchased all the land west of the lower Susquehanna from the Indians. In 1739 or 1740 he laid out a reservation for himself and family in this section. He called it the 'Manor of Maske' after the title of an old English estate belonging to a relative. Surveyors were sent to run out the Manor on June 18, 1741. The squatters in the part to be the Manor opposed the movements very strongly and nothing further was done until 1765 when a compromise with two of the most outstanding residents—James Agnew and Robert McPherson—was made and 43,500 acres were laid off."

"The early settlers on the Manor located on Marsh creek. Some of the land granted was for a church in the forks of Plum run' now the Old Hill church in Freedom township. A tract was given to a Presbyterian congregation in Cumberland township in 1775 which became the Upper Presbyterian congregation of Marsh creek. These congregations still exist to mark the old 'Manor of the Maske'."

Chapel Very Old

"The church of the Sacred Heart or Conewago chapel is certainly one of the oldest and most noteworthy landmarks Adams county has with in her portals. Its history belongs to the history of the Christian church in America than any division of the United States. It was here before the sturdy Germans and Scotch-Irish crossed the Susquehanna and dates back to the period of the Iroquois and Algonquin wars."

"The Canhwagas, a branch of the Algonquin race, rambled south from the Great Lake region and settled there. They were there to welcome the first Jesuit fathers, the first of which was Joshua Grayton, S. J., who was often called 'Father Creighton.' He came in the year 1720 to offer services in a wigwam. In a few years a cabin was erected to be used as a church. This was used until 1740 when the Rev. William Woppler, S. J., had a new one erected in the vicinity of the present church."

First Settlers

"Sam Lilly and Robert Owen and families settled at Conewago in 1730. They were the first white settlers in the vicinity and became members of the church there. We can imagine how glad that faithful Jesuit father must have been when some of his own race came at last."

"Part of the present Conewago chapel was erected in 1787 by Father James Pellentz. Dudley Digges, the owner of 'Digges' Choice' was buried in the chapelyard in 1753 and other stones show regular burials since 1771. Many of the early pioneers have their last resting-place at this beautiful, old historical landmark."

"The American people were the first in history to found a nation on popular education. The sturdy Germans and Scotch-Irish carried to their new homes the firm conviction that a people must be educated to be truly prosperous and happy."

"The first actual school of which there is any record was established at Krentz Kirche, in Union township in 1747. The Rev. Michael Schlatter, a German Reformed minister, was sent to America as a missionary by the Synod of Amsterdam in 1746. He organized a school and church at Krentz Kirche, which continued with regularity for nearly one hundred years, immediately after his arrival here. The school was wholly German and it is at present known as Christ Reformed church, of which the Rev. H. H. Hartman is pastor."

Early Churches

"There are some churches in the county of lesser importance than the two aforementioned that are also early beginnings of the church in this section."

"The Great Conewago or Marsh Creek church was organized in 1740. A meeting-house was built in 1747. The Rev. Caven was the first pastor in 1740. The Rev. Black became pastor in 1775 and aided in erecting a stone church in 1780. 'Black's graveyard' still marks the site of this venerable old church which was sold in 1813 when the congregation moved to Gettysburg."

"Rock Chapel, near York Springs, was the first Methodist church in the county and was built between 1773 and 1776."

"The Pines Presbyterian church is a pioneer concern, indeed. It was the contemporary of Conewago chapel. The date of its erection is not known but among the Irish Presbyterians interred in the cemetery dates are found as far back as 1759."

"The Great Conewago Presbyterian church is situated five miles east of Gettysburg, near Hunterstown. The date of its founding is not exactly known but the earliest records show it as 1740. The first building was put up between 1743 and 1747. It was a log building near the site of the present one."

Mary Jamison Story

"The strange story of Mary Jamison, the Indian Queen, is a tragedy and a romance in strong colors and remarkable contrasts."

"The Thomas Jamisons, some of the earliest settlers, moved to Buchanan valley in 1754 near the source of Marsh creek. They were of Scotch-Irish nationality. Mary was born on the way from the old country and her birth seemed to foreshadow her terrible and sad experiences. Their nearest neighbors were the Bleakneys."

"A few French and Indians attacked the farmhouse one morning while breakfast was being prepared. Eight were taken captive and when the pursuers became known six were scalped, Mary and a neighbor's small son being saved."

"Mary was taken down the Ohio river to a Seneca Indian town. Here she was given a tract of land and treated with very great respect. Her turbulent life ended in 1833 and she was interred at the mission at Seneca."

"A beautiful monument was erected in her honor several years ago in front of St. Ignatius Catholic church, Buchanan valley, in the South Mountains. The early records of the church were destroyed so little is known of its history. The cornerstone for the church was laid October 10, 1816."

"On Flat run, near the Maryland line, there is a place called the old Reed farm, where a Swiss family by the name of Zimmermann settled in 1765. A nine-year-old girl was captured by some Indians in a raid. Ten years later when the whites fought a tribe at Shamokin she was recognized and rescued, being more fortunate in this than Mary Jamison."

First Schoolhouse

"The first brick house to be erected in Adams county was built on land granted to John Hamilton, June 14, 1763, and still stands on the Heltzell farm, four miles west of New Oxford where the Hunterstown road forks from the York and Gettysburg pike. The brick for this house was sent from England. Mr. Hamilton had been induced to get the brick from England because his brother had built a home further south from stone shipped from the mother country. This house, however, is destroyed."

"The owner of the stone house had in his possession some slaves. The burial ground for these slaves was on a knoll west of the C. Miller farm on the York pike and 500 feet north of the railroad. It can still easily be distinguished even though the graves are not marked. This stands as a monument to the beginning of that great evil which was to so nearly rend our nation asunder—slavery."

Old Dobbin House

"In the town of Gettysburg, in the angle formed by the Emmitsburg pike and South Washington street, is a picturesque, ivy-covered, old house called the Dobbin house. The Rev. Alexander Dobbin built this large house in 1774. He was born in Londonderry, Ireland, March 7, 1743. After having graduated from the school at Glasgow, Scotland, he was ordained by the Reformed presbytery of Ireland. A few years later Mr. Dobbin was sent to America as a missionary. He came at once to what is now Adams county and became the first pastor of Rock Creek church. The Rock Creek church was the most important and most influential Covenanter church in America at the time of the American revolution."

"The house he built in 1774 is now the oldest in Gettysburg. The first classical school west of the Susquehanna river was opened here by the Rev. Mr. Dobbin and some of the most outstanding men in all walks of life were educated there by this faithful, well-educated minister."

"During the Civil war the old house served as a shell-proof hospital for the Union forces. The school was closed in 1801 and since that it has been used as a residence. The Rev. Mr. Dobbin died in 1809 and was buried in the Lower Marsh Creek cemetery, leaving behind him a life of service and kindness to others."

"Round Hill graveyard, on Round Hill, just off the road from Hampton to Heidersburg, is one of the most interesting of its kind in Adams county, probably because there is something mysterious about its past. The house nearby was built in the year 1784 by William Jones. The graveyard was then there. It is probably a cemetery of the French Huguenots who had settled at York Springs. It is not known whether or not there was a church but it is known that there was a school-house."

Old Cemetery

"Near Noah Sheely's settlement, above Hilltown, is another old cemetery. This one is said to be the graveyard of some Indian tribe as the stones do not bear inscriptions."

"The small, prosperous town of New Oxford is in itself a noteworthy landmark. It was built upon a land grant from the state to Henry Kuhn and was laid out by James Bolton in 1792. It is located in the heart of a rich agricultural community in southwestern Adams county. The town was originally called 'Providence' but renamed Oxford town from a ford existing on Little Cone-wago creek, one mile west of the village and the head of an ox in front of 'Dutch Frederick's Stand.'"

"Dutch Frederick's Stand" was the first building and was an inn around which the town grew. This old building was erected in 1790 and still stands on the corner of Carlisle street and Center Square. It was an important stage terminal for coaches operated between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The Himes property on Center Square and several log houses were completed in 1798."

Named Postmaster

"When Dr. M. D. G. Pfeiffer was appointed postmaster in 1822 he had the name changed to New Oxford. In 1840 Dr. Pfeiffer founded the New Oxford college and medical institute. He was a German scholar and skilled physician. The school was discontinued because of lack of public support."

"About the beginning of the nineteenth century the people of Adams county realized the great need for an educational institute. Accordingly the legislature passed an act in 1809 granting $2,000 for that purpose. A building was erected and in 1810 the Adams county academy opened for the education of the youth in English and other languages. The house still stands, staunch and firm, on the corner of West High and South Washington streets."

A THOUGHT for the DAY

By
AMOS R. WELLS
The Responsibilities of Liberty

THERE is a noble passage in the writings of William McKinley in which the martyred president uses these prophetic words: "Liberty to make our own laws does not give us license to break them. Liberty is responsibility and responsibility is duty; and that duty is to preserve the exceptional liberty we enjoy within the law and for the law and by the law."

Those words might well have been written for these days of lawlessness. They are true, however, for all times and all persons. The psalmist knew himself to be at liberty only when he was obedient to God's laws. The Christian knows that only Christ's truth, and the observance of it, can make him free. No more ardent nonsense is talked today than the ceaseless chatter about a "personal liberty" which means only personal license to make others drunk. No one is free to do wrong; every one is free to do the right.

"I shall walk at liberty; for I have sought Thy precepts."

TEN YEARS AGO

Taylor Now Cashier: Irvin L. Taylor, who has been employed on the Gettysburg National Bank staff for over twenty years, was elected cashier at the Tuesday meeting of the board of directors, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Edward M. Bender, chosen treasurer of the new Lincoln Trust Company last week.

The selection of Mr. Taylor caused no surprise in the ranks of the bankers as he was considered the logical man for the position.

Entertained Bridge Club: The Evening Bridge Club, composed of residents of Gettysburg and vicinity was entertained at Guernsey Tuesday night by Mr. and Mrs. William C. Tyson.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Arthur Griest, Miss Esther Peters and Wallace Peters were other Guernsey people there besides Mr. and Mrs. Fred Griest, Miss Esther Peters and Mrs. Tyson, while additional guests included Miss Harris, Hagerstown; Roy Privance, New York City; Rutledge Field, North Carolina; Edward Bennett, Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. S. McC. Swope, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Keith, Judge and Mrs. Donald P. McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Donald Swope, Mrs. Charles Huber, Mrs. Sarah Cox, Miss Anna Gilliland, Miss Elizabeth Cox and Miss Edwards, all of Gettysburg.

"Stop Thief" Kept Crowd in Upror: For a time Tuesday night the six hundred persons who packed the Lincoln Way theater were undecided which member of the Senior class of the High School was the biggest crook but they all agreed that "Stop Thief" was the best high school play they had ever seen.

While every character was portrayed with unusual skill, to Gilbert Bell must be given special mention for his presentation of a difficult character role.

The success of the play is due to the most efficient coaching of Miss Helen Cope.

One hundred and seventy-five dollars will be clear and will be used in the various class projects.

The make ups which were especially well done were made by Earl Stallsmith.

The following was the cast of characters, prologue, Evelyn Toot; Joan Carr, Ellen Tipton; Mrs. Carr, Martha Lentz; Caroline Carr, Lillian Weaver; Madge Carr, Elizabeth Evans; Nell, Treva Weikert; William Carr, Gilbert Bell; James Cluney, Horace Armor; Mr. Jamison, Donald Weikert; Dr. Willoughby, Donald Weiser; Rev. Mr. Speloin, Milo Diehl; Jack Doogan, Keith Burger; Joe Thompson, Ross Sheely; Sergeant of the Police, Jacob Schmuckler; police officer O'Malley, James Munger; police officer Clancy, Mark White.

The High School orchestra entertained the audience during the brief intermissions; They were: Esther Hartman, pianist; Henry Scharf, first violin; Harold Roth, second violin; Rex Gilbert, trombone; William Kitzmiller, and Clara Winebrenner, cornets; Charles Ogden, clarinet; and Robert Deardorff, trap drummer.

More Team Workers: Team workers of the United Brethren church will meet in the church on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. At that time final instructions will be given to them regarding the canvass and names of persons to be solicited will be assigned to the different teams.

The teams follow: W. R. Martin, Captain, Beulah Keckler, E. E. Hutchison, Carrie Miller, Ella Minnich; Robert Geiselman, Captain, Emma Howard, Mrs. H. S. Trostle, Katherine Deardorff, George Hughes; L. A. Lupp, Captain, Bertha Swisher, Walter, Little, Mrs. S. G. Spangler, P. O. Oyler, Alice Schriver, M. P. Rindlaub.

Big Sum to Playground: One man has given $300 to the Kurtz Playground, another has donated $75, if eleven others can be found to give $75 a piece, and still others have contributed sums ranging between $20 and $50 to aid the Playground committee to reach its quota of $6,000 before Saturday night.

Off for Penn State: Coach Plank, Captain Kyle, Pitchers Menchey, Yarrison and Wise; Infielders Gingrich, Redcay, Plowman and Bright; outfielders Keyser and Hersh; Coaches Bange and Schaulis, and Manager Cash, of Gettysburg College, have left Gettysburg by automobile for State College to meet the strong team of that institution on Saturday afternoon.

Goldsborough — Wirt: Eugene Worthington Goldsborough, of Hunterstown, and Miss Clara Ellen Wirt, of Straban township, were married by Rev. W. R. Glen, United Brethren pastor, at the United Brethren parsonage on Thursday evening at 6 o'clock.

Soph Players in Stage Success: College Sophomores scored a decided hit Saturday night before a large Junior Promenade audience with their presentation of "The Man from Mexico," in Brna Chapel.

Gettysburg students played a prominent part in the production. Miss Elizabeth Huber, as the wife of "The Man from Mexico," handled the leading lady role acceptably, with Constance Weaver, Mary K. Musselman and Elsie Munma especially good in the role of supporting actresses.

STRUGGLE

If in the end some good remain
Shall we regret its birth in pain?
If at the last some splendor shows
Shall we regret the hammer blows,
The flaming fire, the smoke and grime
Of truth's preparatory time?

Out of the ugliness of things
If at last true beauty springs,
And triumph crowns all battles lost
Shall we regret the strength it cost?
Does aught continue long to please
Which can all be done with ease?

Who rightly views the scenes of life
Sees all achievement born of strife.
All growth is pain, and this is sure,
Who strives for much must much endure.
'Tis only after toilsome years
The greatness of the soul appears.

Stamp, stamp, stamp!
Went Betsy, the old gray mare.
The big horse fly which is bothering her
Had better have a care.

"Botheration!" exclaimed Betsy, swishing her long tail to and fro, "if that disagreeable fly doesn't leave me alone I'll call the Kind Farmer."
"Ha, ha!" chuckled the Horse Fly, settling on Betsy's flank, as he thought beyond reach of her tail. Then with his long, sharp bill, which points upward from the underside of his head, he commenced to prick her glossy skin.

Swish, swish, swish!
Went Betsy's silky tail,
Sudently brushing that naughty fly into the water pail.

"There, now will you be good!" sighed the old mare. "If I'm bothered again I shall ask the Kind Farmer for a flynet. I can't be worried with such a pesky creature as you." The next moment who but the Kind Farmer opened the kitchen door. Perhaps he had understood what the old gray mare was saying. Who knows?

barked Old Sic'em, the faithful watch-dog, crawling out of his little log cabin. But the farmer paid no attention to him, thinking, perhaps, that a tramp was coming down the road. However, tramps never worried the farmer; they never dared to come into the yard while Old Sic'em was there. Tramps don't like dogs and dogs don't like tramps. So, there you are.

As the Kind Farmer buckled the leather collar about Betsy's neck, he watched the big Horse Fly drying himself. After passing his forelegs over his head as a cat washes her face, he rubbed his wings with his hind legs to dry them. If the Kind Farmer had looked through a magnifying glass he would have seen that the big fly's body and legs were covered with hair, and that the lower joint of each leg was like a stiff brush.

"We'd better get out of here before that pesky fly gets in shape to sting us," chuckled the farmer, and leading the old mare out to the buggy, he backed her between the shafts.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE STRANGE BIRD

By Mary Graham Bonner

The scene had changed and the Little Black Clock had taken John and Peggy to see a very strange bird which lived in Australia.

Before they had seen the bird the Little Black Clock took them around to see some strange looking animals.

There were black swans and brush turkeys, kangaroos and wallabies. There were wild dogs known as dingos and there were flying foxes.

There was an emu father looking something like an ostrich. They saw huge ferns—so big that Peggy thought at first they must be trees.

And then they saw the strange bird.

He looked like a musical instrument instead of a bird. Peggy and John at first could hardly believe he was a bird. They couldn't say just what he looked like because they didn't know the name of the musical instrument he resembled.

But they had seen pictures of this instrument—and the bird looked as though he might have posed for the picture.

"I know the instrument you mean," said the Little Black Clock, in answer to the children's question. "It is the lyre, and this bird is called the lyre bird."

He had a train that curved upward in the form of a lyre and it almost seemed peculiar that the bird couldn't play it.

But certainly the children had enjoyed their trip here with the Little Black Clock, for they had seen so many, many, many interesting and amazing creatures.

Australia was indeed the home of a great variety of animals and they wished they could stay and see more. But, as the Little Black Clock often said, that was so much better than wishing they could leave before the trip was over. That, the children knew, would never happen.

American Editors Oppose Gag Law

Washington, April 19 (AP).—Urging editors of the nation to oppose aggressively any law designed to give courts power to censor newspapers, Walter M. Harrison, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, opened its annual meeting Thursday urging support of the Chicago Tribune campaign against the Minnesota "gag" law.

The Minnesota statute, Harrison said, holds that any newspaper or publication which regularly publishes malicious, scandalous or defamatory matter to be a nuisance. Under the law, he continued, the Saturday Press, a small weekly publication of Minneapolis, was restrained from publication.

The injunction was sustained by the higher state courts and the Chicago Tribune, Harrison continued, planned to carry it to the supreme court. The American Society of Newspaper Editors had offered to join the fight against the law.

SAVANT GIVES TIME DOGMA

Sees Time Moving Back As Well As Forward In New Theory.

New York, April 19 (AP).—A revolutionary theory in physics, in which old age disappears from time, was proposed here Thursday by Dr. Gilbert N. Lewis, of the University of California.

More daring than relativity, which does not scrap past and future, this theory may challenge some of Einstein's work. In it time flows either backward or forward interchangeably, and Doctor Lewis explained its existence in physics and chemistry. He spoke at a dinner of the Society of Arts and Science, which presented its two 1930 gold medals for outstanding achievements in science respectively to him and to Dr. J. McKen Cattell, New York psychologist.

The every-day idea Doctor Lewis called "one-way" time. The special kind he named "two-way" or symmetrical. Illustrating "two-way" time, he said with existing data an astronomer can predict an eclipse 1000 years hence or calculate one 1000 years ago with equal accuracy. Or a moving picture of the motions of the solar system could run backward and yet obey Newtonian laws as satisfactory as in forward motion.

Jeweler Buys Two Gold Bars; Gets Brick

New York, April 19.—The first goldbrick sale since congress gaiters were in fashion was consummated Thursday with David Freedman, a jeweler, on the buying end. He paid $680 for "gold bars" that turned out to be a piece of ordinary brick wrapped in a newspaper.

Two city slickers offered Freedman $1500 worth of gold bars for $680. The bars they showed were genuine. Freedman paid, and the bars were locked in a tin box. The box was checked at the Hudson terminal station across the river in New Jersey. Freedman was given what purported to be the check for it. When he presented his check, he drew the brick and newspaper.

It developed that Freedman had been given the wrong check, the check for the fake package having been obtained previously by the slickers, who palmed the receipt for the real gold.

Bohlen-Phillips' Manager Selects Ancient Harrisburg Hostelry For Offices.

Harrisburg, April 19 (AP).—Amid an atmosphere reminiscent of "the good old days" whose return they advocate, the "wet" Republican candidates will conduct their campaign for nomination at the Pennsylvania primary election.

In the words of William S. Adams, executive secretary of the Bohlen-Phillips-Dorance campaign committee, one of the best bar rooms in Harrisburg, now out of business, has been chosen as headquarters for the central Pennsylvania campaign. The rooms in the Adams hotel, once the famous Rife Hostelry, today resounded to the clicking of typewriters from which flowed propaganda intended for distribution to voters whose support of the anti-prohibition platform of the candidates is being sought.

Adjoining the old barroom was once a widely known beer garden patterned after similar establishments in Germany. In this atmosphere Executive Secretary Adams is directing the drive in nine counties, Adams, Franklin, York, Dauphin, Cumberland, Perry, Mifflin, Snyder and Lycoming.

TREATY READY FOR APPROVAL

Delegates Pleased By Result Of Three Months' Work In Peace Sessions.

London, April 19 (AP).—Three months ago Secretary Henry L. Stimson and his colleagues of the American delegation landed in Plymouth en route to the Naval Conference in London.

Thursday the result of their labors for naval limitation, completed in treaty form, was in the hands of the governments of the five great sea powers, awaiting approval by those home governments so the London treaty may be signed at the scheduled time, Tuesday. The salient points of that pact, which will rule the seas until the next disarmament conference, scheduled for 1935, is called into session, are under scrutiny in Washington, Paris, Rome and Tokio.

But the most important development from the American viewpoint was the formal statement by Senator Robinson whereby the United States Senate, which holds America's final word in treaty making, was assured that the "safeguarding clause" of the three-Power pact among the United States, Great Britain and Japan has been moulded in accordance with the traditions of American foreign policy.

More Crimes Put To Julia Fiasco

Los Angeles, April 19 (AP).—Out of the welter of crimes which is alleged to have followed the collapse of the Julian Petroleum Corporation and the disclosure of a $100,000 stock swindle arose Thursday charges of murder, bribery, forgery and embezzlement.

Indications of violence followed a report from County Chemist R. J. Abernathy that a drug, known to criminals as "knockout drops," may have played a part in the strange death of Robert Bursian, undercover agent for the District Attorney's office. Bursian was found Tuesday beneath his wrecked automobile. He had been assigned a "very dangerous mission" on the Julian case.

THEY PASS

I HAVE often wondered what sort of people we would be were we not creatures of moods. We would probably be very uninteresting and unusually dull.

I am glad I have moods. I know many of them are not pleasant to other people—they are not pleasant to myself, but perhaps they help, even me, to appreciate and understand the moods of like nature in others. Everything has a purpose.

But the happy thing about moods is that they pass! All things pass—trouble, worry, sickness, evil reports, stresses of the heart.

Time is a great friend. It heals and soothes, and somehow, balances our lives. The years mold and mellow everything.

When you are very ill you lose interest in much that is dear and beautiful, especially if your body is in great distress. But when the pain has passed and you look again into the face of the world with all that it has to give, the picture changes and life seems good again. You are grateful, you are thankful. You offer a prayer, perhaps, of thanksgiving to the Unseen. You look back upon those pains, and the loveliness of the hours—and then it is that you think of how all things pass.

It is sometimes difficult to bear the evil words of others who seem bent upon hurting you, and upon causing you pain and distress of mind. But genuine character passes right by all this. Like the big dog who trots right along, no matter how many little dogs may for a
